

European Journal of Histochemistry

SUPPLEMENTARY MATERIAL

DOI: 10.4081/ejh.2023.3528

Decreased VEGFA alleviates the symptoms of LPS-induced sepsis in a mouse model by inhibiting glycolysis and thereby regulating the polarization of macrophages

Jun Lin,¹ Liping Jiang,² Kun Guo,¹ Ning Feng¹

¹Intensive Care Unit, Pingxiang People's Hospital, Jiangxi

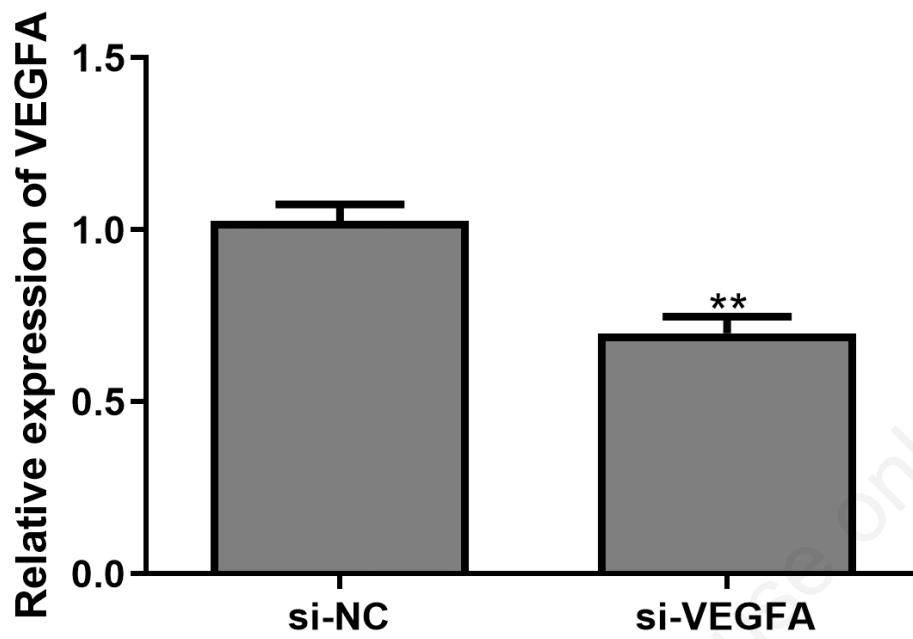

²Division of Science and Education, Pingxiang People's Hospital, Jiangxi, China

Correspondence: Dr. Ning Feng, Intensive Care Unit, Pingxiang People's Hospital. No. 8, Zhongshan Avenue, Pingxiang, Jiangxi 337055, China.
E-mail: fengning2008@163.com

Key words: Sepsis; vascular endothelial growth factor A; macrophage polarization; glycolysis.

Supplementary Figure 1.

Knockdown efficiency of siRNA was evaluated by RT-qPCR.

Non-commercial use only